BBB Scam Alert: Preparing for mask mandates? Watch out for online cons

By Better Business Bureau. October 6, 2020.

Due to COVID-19, many state and local governments have implemented policies requiring people to wear face masks in public places. After the initial outbreak earlier this year, supplies have rebounded slightly; however, BBB Scam Tracker has received numerous reports about scam websites claiming to sell face masks online but not delivering. When trying to find a reliable source to purchase a mask, watch out for phony ecommerce sites and other scams.

How the Scam Works:

When looking to purchase masks to help protect yourself – or family – from coronavirus, you begin searching online retailers.

Unfortunately, there are several phony online stores – especially when an item is in high demand. According to BBB Scam Tracker reports, these phony sellers take victims' money and never deliver anything all. One person reported ordering nearly $200 in masks and received no product or response from the seller: "I checked back a few times over the past week to see if there was updated information on a shipping date, but never got more information than that 'the order was being processed.'" These sites use tricks, like limited time deals, to entice you into ordering more.

In the worst cases, these sites are actually a way to steal your personal and credit card information, opening you up to identity theft.

Watch out for Coronavirus Cons:

Keep the following tips in mind when looking for face masks or other ways to protect yourself from the coronavirus.

- Be savvy about product claims. Be sure to evaluate claims of any medical product before buying. Especially watch out for products claiming to offer a “miracle cure” for a range of ailments.
- Only buy from reputable stores and websites. The best way to avoid getting scammed is to purchase products directly from a seller you know and trust. Check BBB.org to read what other consumers’ experiences have been.
- Be sure the online store has working contact information. If a company seems legitimate but you aren’t familiar with it, be extra careful with your personal information. Before offering up your name, address, and credit card information, make sure the company is legitimate such as if the business has a real street address, a working customer service number and a positive BBB Business Profile. These are just a few of the things to be looking out for to determine if a company is legitimate.
- As the virus spreads, be wary of other coronavirus cons. Look out for fake cures, phony prevention measures and other scams.

BBB Tip: Avoid being "ghosted" by your tax preparer

Many of us have heard of being "ghosted" after a date, but have you ever been ghosted by your tax preparer? Unfortunately, many have and they're often met with serious consequences.

Black Market Tax preparers set up shop around tax time, usually in a rental or short term location. They will often (but not always) promise fast or large refunds to filers. Also known as "Ghost Tax Preparers", these are un-certified individuals that bypass checks and balances in the tax preparer certification system. Commonly, the big refunds they promise. Are not calculated in Legal ways.

In 2006, the IRS made efforts to increase oversight of tax preparers to combat unscrupulous activity in the industry and began to require all tax preparers to have a PTIN, or a Preparer Tax Identification Number. But this system only works if tax preparers sign the returns they file. Some tax preparers that don't want to follow the process, simply don't sign the returns!

Ghost preparers actually prepare the tax return, but when it's submitted to the IRS they ask the taxpayer to sign their own return, making it look like it was self-filed. This doesn't seem like a big deal, until something goes wrong and the preparer is nowhere to be found. Since the return is technically self-filed, the taxpayer is liable for any errors or omissions the ghost preparer made, including underpayment and negligence penalties, which often accompany these situations because the large refund promised was not accurate in the first place.

How do they do this? According to the IRS, "The ghost preparer can print the paper return for their client and tell them to sign and mail it to the IRS. Or, for electronically-filed returns, they will prepare it but won't digitally sign it as the paid preparer."

By law, anyone who prepares, or even assists with preparing, federal tax returns for compensation must have a valid Preparer Tax Identification Number (PTIN). Tax preparers should sign the tax returns they prepare and include their PTIN on the tax return. Here are some red flags to watch for and tips to avoid being ghosted by your tax preparer:

Be wary of those offering fast refunds or large returns. Your return amount, deduction amount, or taxes owed is solely based on your past years tax information and the current tax laws. The time it will take to receive your refund or tax notice, will depend entirely upon the IRS.

- Don't sign your own tax return if asked by a tax preparer.
- Review your tax return before it's submitted to ensure it was signed properly by your tax preparer.
- Only allow funds to be deposited into your personal accounts. Some Ghost Preparers will have funds deposited into their accounts to be later distributed.

- Do your research! Check www.bbb.org for complaints and reviews on tax services in your area. Be cautious of "pop-up" and seasonal tax services. Don't be afraid to ask about their processes, credentials, and for their PTIN. The IRS has resources to help you check those credentials.

Tax scams are very common during tax season. Following these tips, avoiding other common tax scams, and keeping your tax information secure can help keep your finances safe! Report Ghost Tax Preparers to your local BBB or BBB's Scam TrackerSM at www.bbb.org/scamtracker.
